For children

Do it yourself? Absolutely.

With Mepal Mio and Campus, kids quickly learn to do things on their own, spreading sandwiches, opening bottles, drinking without spills. More independence for them means free hands for parents, teachers and childcare heroes. Perfect for school, holidays, on the go or simply at the table. Strong, easy to use and available in cheerful colours and prints that make everyone smile.

Mepal Mio helps little ones enjoy eating and drinking by themselves – one playful moment at a time. Fresh colours and sweet prints make mealtime even more fun for curious kids exploring the world bite by bite.

Campus is ready for every adventure. From sturdy bottles with straws or flip caps – also in stainless steel and insulated – to the tough bento lunchbox for a varied lunch. Everything they need, nothing that slows them down.

If a child understands it, you're on the right track.

For Marleen, every design starts with a simple question: would a child understand this without explanation? “If the product speaks for itself and fits within their world of experience, I know we’re on the right track,” she says. “For parents, it’s all about convenience: how easy is it to clean, how robust is it, and is it truly hygienic?”

But between idea and execution, challenges sometimes arise. During the development of the new straw bottle, the team ran into an unexpected obstacle. “We initially wanted to start from the existing, slim bottle diameter. But that turned out to be too limiting. Only when we let go of that requirement did space open up to create something genuinely new.”

And it shows. The bottle is more robust and stable, and full of smart details: a click that confirms the lid is properly closed, a playful moment when the straw pops up. Familiar and fun for children. It feels reassuringly familiar, yet offers that little extra in terms of ease and enjoyment of use.

Sustainability also plays a major role. “You can completely take the bottle apart, making components easy to replace and recycle. And the lid is even interchangeable with other Mepal bottles. This way, we extend the product’s lifespan.”

So when is a design finished? Marleen is very clear about that: “When no one has any questions left. Not the user, and not us as the design team. That’s when it’s right.”

— Marleen Weststrate, Product Designer

Smart choices for tomorrow.

The Campus lunchbox has been a trusted favourite for school and on the go for many years. Yet the Mepal design team saw an opportunity to introduce a new material: stainless steel. “We noticed a growing demand for stainless steel lunchboxes” Marleen explains. “A signal that aligns perfectly with Mepal’s pursuit of smart, sustainable solutions.”

Stainless steel proved to be a logical choice. “It is extremely robust, lasts a lifetime and is also highly recyclable. That makes it a perfect match for our ambition to create products that are not only practical today, but also ready for tomorrow.”

Despite the different material, the stainless steel version still feels unmistakably like a true Campus product. “The design is instantly recognisable, the box is just as easy to open as the plastic version, and of course it still features a beautiful image on the lid. That way, it remains fun and familiar for children.”

What makes the lunchbox even more appealing? “It feels solid, looks high quality and is extremely practical to use. Everything just fits.”

The choice of materials has also been carefully considered. “All components are recyclable, and the stainless steel itself is virtually indestructible - exactly what you want in a product designed to last for years.”
